Honesty is Bound to Win. We find that the Hamburg-Bremen Fire-Insurance Company does not lack for words of praise outside of Richmond. Read the following from the Shenandoah Valley of the estimable gentlemen doing business for the Hamburg-Bremen Fire-Insurance Company. Their general agent, Mr. John W. Gordon, visited me a few days after my barn, &c., had been destroyed by fire, and in the most gentlemanly manner adjusted my claim, and in six days from the time he saw mel sent me a draft on New York for every dollar of my pol-icy—viz., $2.000. My contract was with the Lynchburg Company, and their policy was payable sixty days after date of settlement. But, mind you, after I had insured in the Lynchburg Company it sold out to the Hamburg-Bremen Fire-Insurance Com-pany. The Hamburg-Bremen company. instead of settling according to the Lynch-burg contract, as it would have bad a perfect right to do, jumped that contract and settled with me according to the obligasettled with me according to the obliga-tions of its own policy—payable as soon as adjusted. They took off nothing, nor did they ask for any reduction, but as soon as possible sent me their draft, thus ena-bling me to prepare for a new barn. It is right for men to do all they contract to do, but many—yes, very many— only do so by being forced by the laws of our country to do it. These gentlemen might have given me much trouble and might have given me much trouble and staved me back at least sixty days, but such was not the case. They paid me at once, and that every dollar of my policy. I have always felt a kindness for prompt, faithful business gentlemen, and in this company I have found all that I have had business with to live up faithfully to their obliga-tions; and hence I feel like recommending

I must not forget their faithful local agent, a most exteemed gentleman, L. Triplett, Jr., at Mount Jackson. Va. Such business-men should be properly appre-ciated by us farmers and the public generally. A Rattlesnake Story.

NARROW ESCAPE OF TWO MEN WHO HAD FIV SNAKES FOR ROOMMATES. It has always been said by old hunters and woodsmen that under certain condi-tions a rattlesnake exudes an odor which tions a rattleshake exides an odor which is not only unbearably offensive to the sense of smell, but that if a person should be subjected to its presence for any length of time in a close room the result would be fatal to him. This has generally been looked upon as one of the many superstitude. tions that pravail among the residents of the backwoods, but a case is reported from the Pocono region, in Monroe county, Pa., which if true, and it seems to be well substantiated, would indicate that the belief is founded on fact. The story is that the property of the on fact. The story is that two men from New Jersey—B. T. Alternus and Samuel S. Roy—while spending a few days in that vicinity looking over some timber-land with a view to purchasing a tract, con-cluded, for the novelty of the thing, to ture's triumphs, and no greater safeguard spend one night in the woods. It was one against noxious things of all kinds, than a of the recent very cold nights. The intention of the men was to sleep in the open air by a camp-fire, but the cold was so intense that they were driven to en-tering an old cabin on the headwarters of the Little Bushhill creek, which

Some time in the night Roy awoke. There was a feeling of great oppression on his chest, and he was breathing with difficulty. There was a peculiarly suckening smell in the cabin. Alternus was breathing hearthy and his nostrils, are removed by the "Revivifier" seven cases in ten within twenty minutes after three minutes' engagement.

Twenty-four years ago I gave up the old-school lore, and was ten years unbowering this remedial boon of boons. I first tested it upon Mr. C. Hinkley, whom it cured of Nasal Catarrh, Bronchittis, and Spasmodic Asthama, in half an hour. His testimonial heralding the "Revivifier" to a world of catarrhous people bears the signatures of Hon. William Clafin, then Governor of Massachusetts; Oliver Warner, then Secretary of State; and N. B. Shurtleff, then Mavor of Boston.

The "Revivifier" has covered itself with holes in the floor. The peculiar odor was still apparent in the cabin, but the pure air that had entered at the open door had disthat had entered at the open door had dis-sipated it to a great degree. The men as-sociated their strange sickness in some way with the snakes, and at first thought that they must have been bitten. They did stay at the cabin to rout out and kill the snakes, but lost no time in reaching the nearest settlement, where they were enlightened as to the theory of the woodsmen's rattlesnake skin-poison. These snakes frequent deserted cabins in the fall, and it is not an uncom-mon thing to see them crawling from their hiding-places even in winter after a fire has been built in the cabin long enough to

[For the Dispatch.] The good order and excellent arrange ment, so far as the appointments would permit, at our last State Fair was a subject of general comment, and nothing perhaps tended more to enlist the favor of our citizens and the people at large towards the Society than this very feature. It showed that men were at the head of the management equal to the occasion. So satisfactory was it that subsequent to the exhibition the machinery exhibitors went so far as to pass resolutions of thanks to the chief marshal, Ashton Starke, for his prompt and courteous treatment, and pledged themselves to attend succeeding fairs whenever possible. Mr. Starke returned from Louisville some days ago, where he had been in the interests of the Society, and brings back good reports—sufficient, I feel it is a duty to express my gratitude to indeed, to promise our people the very best State Fair we have ever had.

From the rapidity with which entries are coming in, especially from a distance, it is evidently presumed that the State Fair of October 31 and November 1 and 2, 1883, will be an unusually big thing, and so great is the interest manifested in the grand competitive military drills that applications are received from companies in States tha cannot compete desiring to attend as organized bodies to witness the contests, Notwithstanding that the capacity for the convenient accommodation of machinery and miscellaneous exhibits has been in-creased there will be probable difficulty in providing space for all applicants.

Our Richmond people are usually late in their entries, merely because they are on the spot and it can be done to the last moment. The 25th of October will be the last day in which entries can be made, and those who defer to the last will be restricted in space and unsatisfactorily located. It is very desirable that our capacities as a manufacturing city and the character and quality of the productions should be displayed in the most attractive and effective manner to the crowds of visitors from all sections, and we would strongly urge our citizens to make their entries and secure proper space for a prominent display of the specialties at the earliest possible mo ment. It will be a most admirable time to impress the general public with the varie ty, extent, and excellence of our produc-tions and manufactures, which, if displayed as they should be, will excite the astonish ment of some of our own quiet citizens who have little idea of the business energy and vitality in their own city, though often surprised by the style and number of buildings and dwellings rising about them to accommodate the increasing trade and Let us have a full and worthy exhibition of everything made and sold here, and don't let people wonder why Richmond men, who have added so largely to the at-tractions of distant expositions, should be indifferent to and unappreciative of their own. Do not permit our manufactures to be surpassed in our own market by others in the same line from afar. Prove your work by trial and competition, and then demand that our people, if for nothing else than personal interest, buy our home manufactures. What right of complaint have you that home people will not patron-ize you if you are equally regardless of the public interests? Richmond men, this is your exhibition, and each man of you owe it to his city and to his business to make the State Fair an eminent success. Those houses and grounds should be crowded Mayne Reid, J. Whitney, Joaquin Miller, Charles when our Fair-Grounds can be made a park of rare attraction and a terminus to the reservoir drive which will be a pride to our city.

Come, men of Richmond, brush up for our coming State Fair, and let's see what we can do. Shame on the man whose public spirit does not go far enough to make him contribute of his means to these public benefits, and on the company which will not aid and facilitate these efforts for the benefit of our city and State.

Swift Punishment. A NEGRO ASSAULTS TWO WHITE GIRLS AND IS

RIDDLED WITH BULLETS. A Columbia, S. C., special says: In the northern part of Sumter county, in what is known as the bull region of the county, Thursday afternoon, a burly, brutal negro named Dick Singleton, who is of immense size, assaulted a little white girl named Bettie Dixon, the daughter of a highlyesteemed planter. The girl, who is but twelve years of age, and unusually intelligent and attractive, was in company with an older sister, some little distance from home, on the borders of a piece of woodland, where they had gone to gather wild grapes.

The older sister, who fought with almost superhuman strength to protect the younger sister, was stabbed by the negro.

At first it was supposed the wound was not dangerous, but later developments indicate that it is probably fatal.

The negro, who is married, fled to his cabin and made no further effort to escape. Last night, about two hours after the crime, a sufficient number of citizens had been notified, and a meeting was held. It was without a dissenting voice resolved that the negro should be shot. The meeting was composed entirely of peaceable men, the most respectable citizens in that part of the county.

They mounted their horses, and, without masks rode quietly down to the negro's house, surrounded it, took him out to the scene of the outrage, tied him to a tree, rid-dled him with bullets, and left the body tied to the tree.

The little girl lies in a precarious condition, and will probably die.

A piece of board with the following words written upon it was nailed to the tree over the negro's head :

OUR WIVES, DAUGHTERS, MOTHERS, AND SISTERS MUST AND SHALL BE PROTECTED." Public opinion justifies the shooting.

The Chancellor. [Edinburgh Review.]

The Chancellor was, even in Saxon times, an official of considerable dignity, and under the Norman kings his functions became more varied and his power progres sively increased. Like other great func-tionaries of the household, he occupied a seat in the Curia Regis; as Keeper of the Royal Seal he had to authenticate all grants and charters; while, as secretary to the King, he became familiar with his most the King, he became familiar with his most private affairs. In the reign of Henry III., when the Chief Justiciary of all England was shorn of his splendor, the Chancellor became the second personage in the kingdom, and his salary exceeded that of any other judge. When the three great couris of common law had been evolved out of and finally separated from the Great Council a large quantity of legislative and judicial work continued to be transacted by the latter. These various matters were brought before the King in council in the form of petitions, and when their number form of petitions, and when their number increased, as it did in the reign of Edward III., it became usual to refer them to the department conversant with the subject-matter of each petition. To the Chanceller, passed off, but left them weak and nervous. They remained out-doors until broad daylight. Upon entering the cabin in the morning what was their horror to see stretched on the hearth, not ten feet from where they had been sleeping, five large rattlesnakes, which crawled away at the approach of the men and disappeared in chinks in the chimney and cracks and holes in the floor. The peculiar odor was equitable jurisdiction is as indubitable and as ancient as his common-law jurisdiction," but in this opinion he differs from all other au thorities; and it is beyond question that, although in early times he may have occasionally granted relief in cases of hardship, it was toward the end of the reign of Edward III. that his powers were systematically exercised upon petitions presented directly to himself. In the next reign we find indignant protests on the you can have it by using Meade & Baker's deli-cious Carbolic Mouth-Wash. Price, fifty cents a bottle. reign we find indignant protests on the part of the Commons against the encroach ments of the Chancellor; and this in itself is sufficient to prove that his jurisdiction had then recently entered upon a novel career. We are not, however, left to conlecture upon this point; for we can place with certainty in this reign the origin of the writ of subpœna, which placed inquisitorial power in the hands of the Chancellor.

The census of the Isle of Man, the de-The census of the Isle of Man, the detailed particulars of which have just been published, shows that during the past ten years the population of the island has been all but stationary. The area of the island is returned as in 1821—the first census year here recorded at 145.225 ages, though here recorded—at 145,325 acres, though the reclamations which have been made at some parts and the denudations that have taken place at others must have caused some variation in the amount of the rectamations which have been made at some parts and the denudations that have taken place at others must have caused some variation in the amount of surface. A remarkable feature is the different ratio in which inhabited and uninhabited houses have increased during the sixty years included in the return. In 1821 the inhabited houses were 6,627, and in 1881 9,425, while the uninhabited houses had grown from 279 to 1,018, and the numin 1831 9,425, while the uninhabited houses had grown from 270 to 1,018, and the number building from 49 to 112. These figures appear to indicate either that builders in the island are speculating in a very reckless manner, or that the annual influx of visitors, which in April, when the census is taken, has not set in. causes a great demand for houses during the "season" alone. The rate of increase in the population has also seen many variations. In the ten years 1821-'31 it was at the rate of 2.3 per cent. The next decade saw a prodigious leap, the actual number added to the population being 6,975, or 17 per cent. During the next ten years also the rate of 2.3 per cent. The next decade saw a prodigious leap, the actual number added to the population being 6,975, or 17 per cent. During the next ten years also the growth of the population proceeded at a fair rate, being 9.2 per cent. Since 1857 however, it has been practically stagnant for in ten years from date the whole increase was but 82, or .2 per cent.; in 1861-'71 it was 1,573, or 3 per cent., while in the last decade it dropped to the prac-tically inappreciable figure of 47, or .1

per cent. The entire increase, therefore, in sixty years has been but 34.9 per cent. With regard to age, the Manxmen can boast of one centenarian, a man stated to be aged 105. 2 women of 95 or more, and 4 men and 14 women of the age of 90 and upward. As to marriage there, 17,009 unmarried males with 17,149 unmarried females to choose from; 8,234 husbands, with, strange to say, only 8,086 wives; 1,048 widowers, and 2,563 widows. The record of occupations of the inhabitants The record of occupations of the inhabitants conatins some interesting information. There are 48 church elergymen, 3 Roman Catholic priests, 20 ministers of various denominations, and 15 missionaries and Scripture readers to look after the spiritual concerns of the population, while the temporal army appears to consist of 31 of-ficers (effective and retired) and 23 noncommissioned officers and men. Militia, yeomanry, and volunteers include 4 individuals, while there are 31 army pensioners. The litigious propensities of the islanders are ministered to by 44 barristers and solicitors, while their bodily ailments afford employment to 29 medical prac afford employment to 29 medical practitioners, 1 of them a lady, 3 dentists, and 6 medical assistants. Education is provided for by 325 teachers of both sexes, while journalism and literary pursuits engross the attention of 10 persons. One actor holds sole possession of the island stage. There are 1,222 farmers and graziers, 1,586 agricultural laborers, 15 shepherds, and 2,633 fishermen. Two game-keepers suffice for all the needs of the
